THE CLEARING ENVIRONMENT: VOLATILITY, NEW PRODUCTS AND REGULATION

The challenges of upholding the safety and confidence in a clearing house are massive, and the clearing arena is in a state of continuous evolution. With an ever-changing economic environment and geo-political actions, the markets are seeing extreme volatility. Even with that volatility, CCPs are introducing new products for clearing and reviewing the implications of recently introduced regulations. Our panel will share their experiences and insights to discuss clearing services and the impact on the global cleared derivatives market.

THE DERIVATIVES LANDSCAPE IN CHINA

Financial sector reforms and the search for continued economic growth is spurring internationalization efforts in China's derivatives markets. The recent China's Futures and Derivatives Law (FDL) is an historic development, being the first law in China regulating futures and derivatives trading at a national legislative level. The opening up and easing of market access to better facilitate cross border trading is being watched very carefully by industry players both in and outside of mainland China. Our panelists will provide their insights on the business potential and risks involved in growing China's derivatives markets.
